IN BOSTON MARKETS.

Plenty of Butter But Not of Best Table Grades.

Boston, Aug. 6.—The local butter, cheese and egg markets show no special change from the conditions of late last week. There is plenty of butter, but not of the best table grades, prices of which are firm. Stock below that grade has a very slow sale and, in endeavoring to keep down the supplies, dealers are not letting slight differences over prices stand in the way of sales. The cheese market also is irregular; really fancy goods are not too plenty and hold firm in price, but there is more ordinary stock than there is a demand for and prices are pretty much in buyers' favor. Really good eggs are still scarce and firm; hennery eggs are so high that buyers are looking for good gathered eggs as a substitute.

Jobbing quotations: Butter—Fancy Northern creamery, tubs 30¢ to 31¢, boxes 31¢ to 31½¢, prints 32¢ to 32½¢; fancy Western creamery, in tubs 29¢ to 30¢; good to choice creamery 27¢ to 28¢.

Cheese—New York twins, fancy 13½¢ to 14¢, fair to good 13½¢ to 14½¢; Young America 17¢ to 18¢.

Eggs—Fancy hennery 36¢ to 37¢; choice Eastern 33¢ to 34¢; fresh Western extras 28¢ to 30¢; firsts 25¢ to 26¢.

CATTLE RECEIPTS INCREASE.

Heavy Inrush to Kansas Stock Yards Due to Drought.

Kansas City, Aug. 6.—The inrush of cattle to the Kansas City stock yards from dry sections of Nebraska, Kansas, Oklahoma and Missouri, which began in earnest Monday when 30,000 head were unloaded, continued yesterday with the receipt of 26,000 more. For the two days of this week the receipts are 20,000 more than for Monday and Tuesday of last week. Prices were 15 to 25 cents a hundred weight lower yesterday, making a drop of 30 cents to $1.25 a hundred weight in the last ten days.

Commission men said that letters and telegrams from the stock raising districts were gloomy and indicated that unless rain came soon the flooding of the local market would be redoubled.

GRANITEVILLE

TAMED THE OLD SOLDIER.

He Was Not "a Beggar," but Carmen Sylva Became One.

One day, walking in a hospital ward, the queen of Roumania came upon an old soldier suffering from a compound fracture of the leg and threatened with gangrene. He would not give consent to the surgeons to amputate. He feared that should he do so he would be classed among the beggars.

"I am not a beggar," said the stout old soldier proudly. "I'll lose my life, but not my honor."

"'Tis true," said Carmen Sylva, "you are not a beggar, but I am." She threw herself on her knees at the bedside. "I have never prayed but to God," and, taking his hand, she added: "But I now supplicate you to listen to his wish and mine. Let your leg be taken off and spare your life to your family, your country and to me, and—"

"And, if I consent, what then?" "What then?" she exclaimed joyfully. "Why, I shall give you the most beautiful artificial leg that can be made in Europe, and when the war is over you shall come and dance at the palace with your sons."

"I consent," he said softly, "but you must hold my hand during the operation."—T. P.'s London Weekly.

"JUMP, JUDY, JUMP!"

Dancing in London in the Early Part of the Last Century.

Lady Bell, writing in the London Times regarding the modern dance, quotes extracts from "The Letter Bag of Lady Elizabeth Spencer Stanhope." The following passages are taken from a letter written in 1812:

"Lady Elizabeth gave a very successful ball, where, for the first time in London, the polka was danced in public and people stood upon the chairs and roost seats to watch it. . . . Mr. Theodore Hook declared that 'the obnoxious dance was calculated to lead to the most licentious consequences.' . . . Subsequently the Sporting Magazine . . . denounced the dance which, to the disgrace of sense and taste, has obtruded itself into the whole circle of the fashionable world, . . . a will corrupting dance, . . . a compound of immodest gesture and infectious poison."

On the other hand, I must also quote from the same work the admonition of an Irish lady of that period at a ball to her daughter, who was not displaying enough spirit in her dancing: "Jump, Judy, jump! The guardsmen are looking on!"

Intellectual Humor.

The region of intellectual humor, which may be roughly illustrated by such sayings as that of George Sand that nothing is such a restorative as rhetoric or the claim advanced by a patriot that Shakespeare was undoubtedly a Scotchman on the ground that his talents would justify the supposition. The humor of George Sand's epigram depends upon the perception that rhetoric, which ought to be based upon a profound conviction, an overwhelming passion, an intense enthusiasm, is often little more than the abandonment of a personality to a mood of intoxicating ebullience, while the humor of the Shakespeare story lies in a sense of the way in which a national predilection for oration is all reasonable evidence.—A. C. Benson in "At Large."

The Scotch Invaders.

One of the most valiant defenders of the Scots parliament was Lord Belhaven, who delivered an eloquent oration in which a vision of Scotland undone by English invaders filled the bill. He saw poor Caledonia overrun by English traders, English attorneys, English judges—the whole nation, in fact, looking in vain for work because England had sent her aliens into every town to fill the fat places. The alarming speech produced a profound effect until Lord Marchmont suggested that Belhaven should add, "I awoke, and behold it was a dream!" And a dream it has proved, if we interpret dreams in the usual way, by contraries.—London Chronicle.

Getting Round It.

A young lady was critically examining a pair of shoes which the clerk had just fitted on. She carefully scrutinized first one foot, then the other. Finally she said slowly:

"Don't you think one of my feet is larger than the other?"

"No, indeed, madam!" replied the would be diplomatic clerk. "On the contrary, I think one is smaller than the other."—Lippincott's.

What the Trouble Was.

A man was fixing his automobile. "Trouble?" asked a bystander. "Some," was the laconic answer. "What power car is it?"

"Forty horse," came the answer. "What seems to be the matter with it?"

"Well, from the way she acts I should say that thirty-nine of the horses were dead."

Lost His Rudder.

"Dinkie says he doesn't know what to do with himself when his wife's out of town."

"I'm not surprised. However, he knows what to do with himself when she's in town, because she tells him."—Birmingham Age-Herald.
